

RADIATION REIMBURSEMENT SYSTEMS

Radiation Oncology billing and charge capture continues to become more complicated making it difficult to maximize reimbursement for the services you provide each day to your patients.

In order to ensure that you are garnering the greatest return on investment for your Radiation Oncology program, AmerOnc has created Radiation Reimbursement Systems (RRS™) to safeguard that your operation is not leaving any potential revenue on the table.

What is it and who can use this service?

RRS is a proprietary system that analyzes and reviews data up to 27 months old in order to find potential inaccuracies or inefficiencies in the billing of Radiation Oncology charges.

Any practice providing and billing for radiation treatments can use RRS. Even if you are currently using a record and verify software program, RRS will bear significant results.

Does it work? Is it invasive in my daily practice operations?

RRS has been successfully used by radiation practices around the country.

RRS has found a significant amount of charges in every single practice.

Unlike some other auditing companies, the majority of AmerOnc's RRS service is done through electronic extraction and evaluation of data off-site so that the work is very unobtrusive to daily site operations.

What is the cost?

Because of RRS' proven track record of success, there is no up front or out of pocket cost to the practice. All of AmerOnc's costs including personnel, travel, etc. are at our expense.

The recovered reimbursement from the identified radiation charges are split 50/50 between the practice and AmerOnc.

No payments are made to AmerOnc until you have been reimbursed by your payors for the charges identified by RRS.

Additional Benefits

All of the RRS outcomes are shared with the practice allowing the practice to immediately seize opportunities for reimbursement on the identified charges.

The practice can make instantaneous changes to current billing and operational procedures to prevent future loss of revenue.
